While cherishing the planet that you call home should be a daily practice, Earth Day gives us the opportunity to celebrate the natural wonders in our backyard, the next state over, and even the next country. In addition to recycling, paying close attention to water use and conservation, and turning off lights when you don't need them, another way to contribute to preserving the globe and its resources is to shop naturally and consciously. An easy place to start? With your makeup bag and medicine cabinets!

Since women contribute the most to the economy via consumerism, make an effort to green-a-fy your beauty products by adding these hair, skin, and cosmetic products to your shopping list next time you need to restock:

Fairy Tales Curly-Q Hydrating Shampoo

Every gal with curls knows it takes practice to figure out how to maximize the natural beauty of your hair texture. For a shampoo that'll improve your locks while helping the planet, consider this hydrating product. It's made with quinoa and rice amino acids — both of which define curls — along with Murumuru butter to moisturize and manage curls. It's paraben- and allergen-free, too!
